

THE RESIDENCE OF PRINCE AND PRINCESS KALANIANA'OLE AT WAIKIKI.

SPLENDID FETE SPEEDS GUESTS

out on a bed in one of the sleeping apartments was the magnificent velvet and peacock feather spread which formerly decked the bed of King Kalaniana'ole in Iolani Palace.

In the grounds outside refreshments were passed about by servants who seemed to appear from nowhere. In the most unexpected places chairs were found and the guests found no difficulty in finding places for a temporary rest.

The scene, both in the receiving pavilion and in the house, was one of wondrous brilliance. The elaborate evening toilets, the plain black clothes of the civilians, the white and gold of the Army officers, the striking mess jackets of the Navy and Marine Corps officers, all contributed their share toward completing the striking picture.

Admirals Sebree and Barry, with their signalled aides, and the captains of the visiting cruisers in the harbor, and officers of the armored cruiser squadron were present and made a very effective picture as they bent low over the hand of the venerable ex-Queen of the Hawaiian Islands.

The arrangements were as nearly perfect as careful forethought could make them. Policemen and guides stationed through the grounds pointed the way to the guests and despite the size of the assemblage there was no confusion. Even the cloaks and hats were cared for without confusion, tents being provided for that purpose and competent attendants being provided. There was no exchanging of hats and coats and almost no delay in the receipt and receiving and returning of the articles.

The night could not have been more perfect. Cool enough to be thoroughly comfortable, and yet not cold enough to cause the guests any discomfort, the air was such as only Hawaii can boast.

The receiving line was as follows: Prince and Princess Kalaniana'ole, Queen Liliuokalani, Honorable Richard Bartholdt, Hon. George W. Prince, Mrs. Prince, Hon. James McLaughlin, Miss McLaughlin, Hon.
